

"SAM."

Traveler, often have I seen thee,
In each hour of the day—
When the eve was dusky purple—
When the dawn was breaking gray—
I have seen the climb the hill-top,
Through the city—through the hamlet—
In the sunshine and the rain,
And I fain would learn of thee,
Traveler! what thy name may be—
"I am he whose mission sends him
Wandering up and down the land,
O'er the forest-mantled mountain,
By the booming ocean's strand;
O'er the hill—along the valley—
Through the hamlet, through the town,
Constant to my glorious mission,
I go wandering up and down,
And I'll tell thee, who I am,
Washington's successor—SAM."

Traveler! I have seen thee passing
By the lordly palace door;
I have seen thee gently knocking
At the dwelling of the poor.
Dost thou teach some new evangel,
Wandering word—rebuking ill?
What may this glorious mission
Thou art striving to fulfill?
Tireless wanderer, tell to me,
What this task of thine may be.
"Tis in myriads of bosoms,
That were growing careless, cold—
To re-light the patriot fires
Of the noble men of old,
So that when the hour of danger
Strikes its wild alarm knell,
They may rise, 'a wall of fire,'
'Round the land I love so well.
Now, I would tell thee who I am,
And the task assigned to SAM."

Gov. Robert of Louisiana, on the "State of the Union."

The Governor of Louisiana closes his message to the Legislature just organized, with the following language:

"The wild spirit of fanaticism which has, for many years, disturbed the repose of the country, has steadily increased in power and influence. It controls the councils of several States, nullifies the laws of Congress enacted for the protection of our property, and resists the execution of them even to the shedding of blood. It has grown so powerful that it now aspires to control the Federal Legislature. The fact can no longer be concealed, however much it may be regretted. The slave-holding States are warned in times they should be prepared for the issue. If it must come, the sooner the better. The time for concessions on our part and compromises has past. If the Union cannot be maintained upon the just and wholesome principles of the Constitution, concessions and compromises will only retard the dissolution, not save it. They have had, thus far, no other result than to encourage attack and to increase the number of abolitionists. It would, however, be premature to suggest practical measures of resistance or retaliation. The present session of Congress will develop fully the plans of the party. Your own action must depend in a great measure, upon the course which they shall pursue. The responsibility will be upon those who have forced us, in defense of our most sacred rights, of our honor, and of our very existence, to resort to extreme remedies."

"Gov. Ligon, in his message to the Legislature of Maryland, uses the following language—

"In any action you may deem it expedient to take in this behalf, let me admonish you that a spirit of moderation should preside over and guide your councils. The language of menace and bravado is in bad taste, and never accomplished any good. We, of Maryland, occupying the position of a border State, dwelling upon the dividing line between the two extremities of interest and opinion upon the subject of slavery, have an especial interest in desiring the adjustment of this unhappy source of popular discontent upon a basis which will secure permanent tranquility. While, therefore, we should express calmly and clearly our opinions as to the issues thus unfortunately forced upon us, and make no concealment of our resolution to maintain the rights of the States under the constitution against any infringement, we should carefully abstain from the use of language calculated to irritate and inflame those who may differ with us in opinion, or to impair those fraternal ties which should bind in perpetual unity and concord the people of the respective States. Let wild and unprincipled fanatics, wherever found, endanger the continuance of the Union if they will, until the last vestige of friendly relationship and brotherly regard be swept away, but let ours be the more grateful task to cast oil upon the elements of destruction, and if that dark day shall ever dawn which shall witness the downfall of this the most glorious fabric of government the wisdom of man has ever contrived, no share in the sin of so great a calamity to the cause of freedom throughout the world can be laid at our door."

"A correspondent of the Louisville Journal gives his experience with reference to the advantages of Poland oats over ordinary varieties. His last crop of oats produced fifty bushels to the acre. From the poorest and most worn piece of ground on his farm, thirteen hundred bushels were obtained the second year from the product of three bushels sown the first year, abating a loss of ten bushels by rats."
